

COL. COOPER DIES; WAS SLAYER OF SENATOR CARMACK

Survivor of Fatal Political Feud Was Saved From Prison by Pardon.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 6.—The death Saturday of Col. Duncan B. Cooper, seventy-nine, recalled his connection as slayer of former United States Senator Edward Ward Carmack, on the streets of Nashville in the fall of 1908, during a heated political campaign. Col. Cooper died after a brief illness. His funeral will be held to-day.

The death of Carmack at the hands of Col. Cooper and his son, Robin, now dead, was the culmination of one of the bitterest political fights in the State's history.

At the time, Carmack was editor of the Tennessean, following his defeat in a Democratic primary by Malcolm R. Patterson of Memphis for the gubernatorial nomination. The Tennessean was waging a bitter editorial war on Gov. Patterson after his inauguration and the name of Col. Cooper, as one of the staunch friends and advisers of the Governor, often appeared in its columns.

Word was sent to Carmack by a mutual friend that Cooper would not countenance further public use of his name. The next day an editorial paragraph was written in which sarcastic reference was made to Cooper.

The death of Carmack occurred the following day on Church Street. He was met by Duncan Cooper and his son, Robin, as he was talking to a woman. Shots were exchanged and Carmack fell. Robin Cooper was shot in the breast, but recovered. Col. Cooper was uninjured. The trial resulted in the conviction of both Coopers, the elder getting a sentence of twenty years in prison and his son a lesser term.

An appeal was taken to the Supreme Court. The court affirmed the verdict in the case of Col. Cooper and gave the son a new trial. As soon as the decision of the court was announced Gov. Patterson issued a pardon for Duncan Cooper. Robin Cooper's case on retrial was dismissed for want of a prosecutor.
